Soviet Plan Bared

Germans Due For Red Sphere

BERLIN, Aug. 10—U.S. intelligence officials claimed today that Russia has a master plan ready to take over all of Germany after Allied occupation armies withdraw.

The scheme reportedly is based on a gigantic Communist "fifth column."

A warning was given by one official that if anti-Communist parties are not strengthened civil war might break out if the Soviets try to push westward to the Rhine.

The Russians are said to count primarily on two aids to win control:

1. A so-called "phantom army" of German war prisoners, led by Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, commander of the Nazi Sixth Army which was defeated at Stalingrad.

2. German Communist police led by Russian secret agents who now rule the eastern occupation zone of Germany.

THE SOVIET plan is likened to that already reported in Korea where a Soviet-trained Korean army and police force reportedly awaits only the departure of the American army from Southern Korea before moving to take over all of the country.

United States authorities in Berlin are said to be reluctant to see any specious settlement of the German problem in a Big Four conference because of the purported Soviet master plan to make Germany a vassal of the Communist bloc.

America's high command is pictured as fearing that the public in the Western countries might be hoodwinked into a belief that an agreement for withdrawal of occupation forces would also get the Red army out of Germany.

In London, British Foreign Secretary Bevin today talked with U.S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas to review the secret

Vital German Railroad Still Unusable, Claim

BERLIN, Aug. 10—The traffic manager of the Russian-controlled economic commission declared today that the rail line from Berlin to western occupation zones remains unusable.

The statement was made by General Traffic Manager Wilhelm Besener in denying a report attributed to William T. Babcock, American deputy commandant in Berlin, that the Berlin-Helmstedt line soon would be ready for resumption of coal shipments.

Besener added that nothing could be said at present concerning the progress of repair work which the Soviets asserted had to be done before the line could be reopened.

It was disclosed meanwhile that only 560 of approximately 5,000 firms in the western sector of Berlin have applied for loans to offset the freezing of mark accounts belonging to the businesses by the Russians.

The Western governments had offered loans of up to 100 Western marks per employee.

The majority of the firms balked when the Western powers specified that the loans must be repaid in 60 days with three percent interest. They claimed that they would be unable to meet the conditions.

EAST-WEST JABS CONTINUE

U.S. Denies Slav Claim Italian Treaty Violated

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 10—The United States continued to deny today Yugoslav charges in the United Nations that it violated the Italian peace treaty provisions on Trieste.

United States, France and Britain meanwhile intend to make it clear to Russia and Yugoslavia that Trieste will be better off as an integral part of Italy than a free territory.

The Trieste issue is before the Security Council after Marshal Tito's regime accused the Anglo-American authorities of concluding postal, currency and trade pacts with Italy. Yugoslavia claims the pacts are designed to wipe out the free territory status.

Initial hearings disclosed that in spite of the rift between Tito and the Cominform, the Soviet Union is putting up a solid front on all issues between Russia and her satellites.

THE WESTERN group is reinforcing its counter-charges with a report on the Anglo-American administration of Trieste received from Maj. Gen. T. S. Airey. He is commander of the British-American military situation and the current true.

But the major effort of the 11-nation delegates will be concentrated on rapping each other on charges and counter-charges underlined by the East-West conflict.

Soviet Spokesman Dmitri Manuilsky touched this off again in the conventional arms commission yesterday by declaring that American rearment and not Russia is the main threat to world peace.

Letters Show Soviet Distrust Of Slav Chief

BELGRADE, Aug. 10—An amazing record of Moscow's distrust of Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito was revealed today.

New disclosures concerning events leading to the break between Yugoslavia and Russia are contained in a secret Yugoslav pamphlet now in the hands of a Western embassy in Belgrade.

In it is brought to light a Soviet effort to infiltrate agents into the Yugoslav secret service and to establish a Russian espionage network through Yugoslavia.

It also discloses that Tito sought in vain to get rid of Soviet military advisers as far back as 1946.

The pamphlet gives the contents of three letters which Tito wrote to Soviet Premier Stalin and to Foreign Minister Molotov in April and May of this year.

Two of the letters, signed jointly by Yugoslav Vice-Premier Edvard Kardelj insisted that Stalin's dissatisfaction with Yugoslav policy was based on "inaccurate and slanderous information" supplied principally by two ousted former Yugoslav ministers.

Leaders predicted about 80 percent of them would exercise their right.

Red Spy Prober Demands Prosecution For Perjury

Reds Defied; Panel To Call Russian Tutor For Testimony

Somebody Is Lying, Solon Says

Panel Continues Commie Hearings

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee charged today the Communist spy ring hearings are "filled with perjured testimony" and demanded prosecution of witnesses.

The demand came after Elizabeth Bentley and Duncan Lee, ex-Army officer she named as a wartime Soviet spy contact, told conflicting stories and accused each other of lying.

Rep. Hebert, (D) La., commented, "I don't know who is a liar and who isn't, but there is one thing self-evident: A criminal violation of the law has been committed." Hebert added:

"These hearings are filled with perjured testimony. Perjury has been committed here and the Justice department must prosecute for perjury those witnesses who have not told the truth."

Rep. Mundt, (R) S. D., said he "subscribed 100 percent" to Hebert's demand.

The story told by Miss Bentley and Lee conflicted in most every respect except that they admitted they knew each other.

THE BENTLEY woman took the stand after Lee denied her assertions that she obtained confidential information from him.

She declared that in October or November, 1944, she asked him about the atom bomb project at Oak Ridge, Tenn., — the super-secret—and that he told her something big apparently was going on there.

Miss Bentley also testified that Lee, "very much upset," told her on another occasion that the OSS "top command" was discussing an exchange of secret agents with Russia.

The ex-spy said Lee told her that among those at the "top command" meeting were Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the late President Roosevelt, and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI. She said this was in the Spring of 1944.

Miss Bentley said Lee was a Communist "to the best of my knowledge." He denied that he ever had been a Communist.

She said she believed Lee suspected she was a Russian agent. Lee told the committee he suspected no such thing, but thought her to be a "lonely and frustrated" woman whose liberal views became dangerously extreme.

Lee said that he and his wife broke off their relationship with the woman when she became an "emotional weight around our necks." He declared she became

Czech Underground Leads 13 To Safe Yankee Exile

FRANKFURT, Aug. 10—A Czech "scarlet pimpernel" organization was reported today to have snatched Peter Zenkel, National Socialist leader, and led him to a safe exile in the U. S. German occupation zone of Germany.

The chief executive charged that Congress "deliberately neglected" large groups of citizens "who are forced to live in disgraceful urban and rural slums."

"In short, the Congress in enacting this bill has deliberately neglected those large groups of our people most in need of adequate housing—the people who are forced to live in disgraceful urban and rural slums."

Zenkel and his wife a few days ago were on a trip to the country near Prague when he was suddenly "arrested" by what he thought were government agents installed after the Communists coup in February.

Indianapolis and Milwaukee residents have been conducting a telephone campaign for the past several days in an effort to get housewives to boycott the meat counters.

Many of the boycott campaigns in the various sections of the nation are being conducted in the same manner. Neighbors call five friends and ask their support in the campaign and those called phone five others in the meantime.

Mrs. L. J. Senn reported today that the Toledo housewives' chain-telephone campaign against high meat prices is getting results.

Mrs. Segn, President of the Housewives League, said the current campaign is getting results similar to those obtained in a like drive two months ago.

She added that the housewives, who originally were asked only to cut down on their meat purchases, now have been asked to refrain entirely from buying meat.

Catholic and Methodist clergymen in Bay Shore, L. I., said they would pray for action to bring lower prices as they extended their blessings to the campaign to get meat prices reduced.

Nationwide Meat Buyers' Strike Starts To Touch Here

A buyers' strike against high meat prices was racing through the nation Tuesday and Circleville butchers, for the most part, indicated that they were beginning to feel what may be the first taste of the protest.

Disregarding a natural summer slump against meats, the majority of Circleville's meatmen Tuesday reported a decline not akin to the summer slump.

This was especially true among butchers in residential areas. One butcher declared, "My customers have quit buying entirely."

Another said his slump was noticeable the latter part of last week.

In the uptown business district, butchers reported the decline had not yet touched them to a large extent. One said his business was on the upgrade, but he did not deny that restaurants, now enjoying tourist trade, may be buying more than their usual quotas.

Meanwhile, International News Service reported that housewives in all parts of the nation now are boycotting the meat counters in their local stores in an effort to

The second part of the Security Council discussion calls for renewed consideration of the latest problems on the Palestine situation and the current truce.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—President Truman today reluctantly signed what he termed the "so-called housing act," and simultaneously unleashed a bitter new attack upon the Republican-controlled Congress.

In the Madison, Wis., area, a group of 85 food markets took the offensive by announcing it would not advertise meats for a week in the hope that it will make the packers recognize the situation and sell meat for lower prices.

The 71-year-old Dallas, Tex., grandmother who started the nationwide uprising by suggesting the boycott said she was getting congratulatory telegrams from all over the country praising her idea.

The woman, Mrs. R. D. Vaughn, said it was too early to determine what effect her campaign was having. Dallas' insistent housewives claimed a broad victory after the first day of their no-meat-buying campaign.

Some slight effect from the strike was seen in Monday's light shipments of livestock to the Chicago Union Stockyards. Observers felt that light ship-

Lee admitted that he twice met the late Jacob Golos, the man who, according to Miss Bentley, brought her into the Soviet espionage service. He said their conversation was "entirely social," and that he didn't know Golos was a Communist until several years later.

IN CONTRAST to previous witnesses, Lee, when asked to "deny or affirm" Miss Bentley's statements, loudly declared:

"I deny them in every respect in which they are contrary to the testimony I have previously given."

Lee said he believed Miss Bentley attempted to use him for "her own personal buildup" with leaders of the Red spy network.

He declared the woman sought to show she had access through him to "someone" of the importance of Gen. Donovan"—(Gen. "Wild Bill" Donovan, who headed the OSS.)

Miss Bentley, who stared steadily at Lee as he testified, snorted in disgust as he described her as "frustrated and lonely" and told how she "carried on" when he and his wife let it to be known they no longer wished to associate with her.

When Lee left the stand, Miss Bentley again was asked to testify. It was her fourth appearance on the witness stand.

She stated flatly that Lee gave her valuable information which she turned over to Russian agents.

Lee was the first witness in the committee's investigation of a wartime espionage network in Washington to admit that he knew the Bentley woman, a confessed "courier" for the spy ring.

He said that he met Miss Bentley in October, 1943, and that she was introduced to him as "Helen Grant."

Lee denied that he ever gave Miss Bentley any confidential OSS information.

The witness said he met Miss Bentley at the home of Mary Price, then a War Production Board secretary.

Lee launched into his testimony with a description of his four years in the Army with the "cloak and dagger" OSS. He said he entered the service as a lieutenant and was promoted through higher grades to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

For almost a year, invalids of Pickaway County have been using without cost three wheelchairs and four pairs of crutches available in the Circleville American Legion home.

The equipment was given to the service organization after it had vouchsafed its support to a Dallas, Tex., publisher selling farm magazines in this area, Emanuel Hundley, Legion custodian said.

He reported the wheelchairs have been in constant use ever since they arrived here. In one instance, Hundley reported, a family was at the Legion home to get use of a chair even before it was uncrated.

Pickaway County authorities have released Bobby Kincaid, 21, of Beaver, W. Va., to Chillicothe police where his case will be presented to Ross County grand jury for allegedly passing two bad checks.

The youth was being held in the Pickaway County jail under $1,000 bond after he had pleaded innocent to a sheriff's warrant accusing him of grand larceny.

"The new bill fails to make any provision for low-rent public housing. It fails to make any provision for slum clearance and urban redevelopment. It fails to include any provision for special aids for farm housing. It includes only limited provision for research to bring down building costs.

The President said that he was signing the measure only because it would be of some slight help in meeting the critical housing shortage, "but the people of this country should understand clearly that it falls far short of the legislation which could and should have been enacted."

Somebody Is Lying, Solon Says

Lee admitted that he twice met the late Jacob Golos, the man who, according to Miss Bentley, brought her into the Soviet espionage service. He said their conversation was "entirely social," and that he didn't know Golos was a Communist until several years later.

IN CONTRAST to previous witnesses, Lee, when asked to "deny or affirm" Miss Bentley's statements, loudly declared:

"I deny them in every respect in which they are contrary to the testimony I have previously given."

Lee said he believed Miss Bentley attempted to use him for "her own personal buildup" with leaders of the Red spy network.

He declared the woman sought to show she had access through him to "someone of the importance of Gen. Donovan"—(Gen. "Wild Bill" Donovan, who headed the OSS).

Miss Bentley, who stared steadily at Lee as he testified, snorted in disgust as he described her as "frustrated and lonely" and told how she "carried on" when he and his wife let it be known they no longer wished to associate with her.

When Lee left the stand, Miss Bentley again was asked to testify. It was her fourth appearance on the witness stand.

She stated flatly that Lee gave her valuable information which she turned over to Russian agents.

Lee was the first witness in the committee's investigation of a wartime espionage network in Washington to admit that he knew the Bentley woman, a confessed "courier" for the spy ring.

He said that he met Miss Bentley in October, 1943, and that she was introduced to him as "Helen Grant."

Lee denied that he ever gave Miss Bentley any confidential OSS information.

The witness said he met Miss Bentley at the home of Mary Price, then a War Production Board secretary.

Lee launched into his testimony with a description of his four years in the Army with the "cloak and dagger" OSS. He said he entered the service as a lieutenant and was promoted through higher grades to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Legion Invalid Gear Gets Use

For almost a year, invalids of Pickaway County have been using without cost three wheelchairs and four pair of crutches available in the Circleville American Legion home.

The equipment was given to the service organization after it had vouched its support to a Dallas, Tex., publisher selling farm magazines in this area, Emanuel Hundley, Legion custodian said.

He reported the wheelchairs have been in constant use ever since they arrived here. In one instance, Hundley reported, a family was at the Legion home to get use of a chair even before it was uncrated.

Kincaid Sent To Ross Jury

Pickaway County authorities have released Bobby Kincaid, 21, of Beaver, W. Va., to Chillicothe police where his case will be presented to Ross County grand jury for allegedly passing two bad checks.

Kincaid is the suspected confederate of Robert C. Lilly, 24, of Beckley, W. Va., who is serving time in Mansfield reformatory for issuing a check with insufficient funds at the Clifton Motor Sales.

The youth was being held in the Pickaway County jail under $1,000 bond after he had pleaded innocent to a sheriff's warrant accusing him of grand larceny.

China Expert Says Reds Not To Absorb Orient

Circleville Kiwanis Club members were told at their Monday evening dinner meeting that the world should not be too concerned about Communism absorbing China, for just the opposite will be true.

The speaker was Arthur Tye, a native of Peking, China, and currently a student in advanced pharmacy at Ohio State university.

Tye, who declared no foreign ideology ever survived in his native Oriental nation, said he was convinced that the present Communists in China were not of the Karl Marx variety.

Rather, he said, they were made up of disgruntled poor people along with radical students.

The speaker declared that within a matter of years, China will "swallow up" the Communist influence as it has with many other philosophies and forms of government forced upon it.

HE CITED that Chiang Kai-Shek rode into power with the aid of Russian-backed Communists. Tye declared that Chiang used Communist weapons and supplies until he had control of the government. Then, Chiang dismissed the Russians, drove them out of his government.

Tye declared this was the greatest defeat Russian diplomats ever have suffered. Tye believes that even today, the central government may take the Chinese Reds into the fold—and then swallow them up as they have done for centuries past.

Tye said this procedure was as old as the Chinese civilization itself. The Chinese, he said, are a democratic people who love life, love to live it and have little use for "modern mechanical" advancements so vital to the Western world.

It is their simple life and love of family ties which will keep them free of foreign influence.

Tye said that the Marshall Plan is a good thing for China—so far as food and medical supplies are concerned. However, he believed that the military power-politics going with ERP will have little value to the Chinese as people. He believes the Chinese "must and can work out their own destiny." He said, however, that from the American point of view, military aid to China will set up a bulwark against Communism which will make an impression on the rest of the world.

Tye repeated, however, that the world should have little fear of Communism absorbing China, for by its very nature, China will absorb the foreign influence and destroy it.

TYE SAID the average thinking Chinese is none too concerned about current strife in his nation. Chinese history, he explained, has shown a long series of "peaks" in its civilization. He said they cover about 400 years. Last "peak" in China's civilization came in the 18th century, he said, about the time of the American Revolution.

A change in the Chinese government came about 1911 when the present government was set up by Sun Yat-Sen. Since then, there has been civil war, famine and pestilence. These are natural and expected by the Chinese. "The population is too great. If we cannot control the situation

Wilberforce Split Widens

XENIA, Aug. 10—The church-state split at Wilberforce university near here reached a new intensity today as the church closed its high school at the university.

Officials of the African Methodist Episcopal church said the closing was part of a "re-termination and reorganization program" in progress since Ohio withdrew public funds from support of the church part of the school.

The 92-year-old high school was among the oldest in the state. It was established in 1836 as a boys' academy. It has been used in later years to train teachers and children of both sexes in the community.

He said that to the Chinese, an obvious fault with the Western world is the fact that in the West, material gains have outdistanced moral standards. As a result, a person of the West is not satisfied unless he has the best of all mechanical advancements.

Westerns, he said, are unable to play or live life fully. He declared that the average football game is evidence of that. Detectives arrested Martin J. Gilbert, 45, former pinboy who worked himself up to manager of the Sunset-Logan Recreation Center in Los Angeles, as he worked as a pinboy in a Toledo bowling alley.

Gilbert is wanted on a charge of embezzling $800 from the Sunset-Logan center.

AT THE MOMENT, China's biggest problem is to get on its feet. It is groping with a new government, is suffering from over-population now estimated at 500 millions, and it is trying to increase its productivity.

Eight years of the Japanese war, in which the Chinese practiced the "scorched earth" policy in front of the advancing enemy, all have left China poor and weak.

At the same time, the Communists are attempting to exploit the country. All these handicaps are slowing China's recovery.

But Tye insisted that China's slow-moving family influence will one day absorb all the evils, swallow them, and China again will have reached another peak in its civilization.

SLOWING OF EVENTS

MATTERS in the German crisis have seemed to move with nerve-wracking slowness since the three Western powers joined in diplomatic overtures to the Kremlin. Actually events have gone for a walk as quickly as diplomatic affairs can be expected to move. The sense of slowness is largely by contrast with the rapidfire daily developments characteristic of the growth of the crisis.

It is a relief to have events moving slowly again. A leisurely pace is indicative of thoughtful moves, of proposal and counter-proposal rather than threat and counter-threat. It suggests a considered statement and reasoned reply, deliberate delay for the advantage of the second thought.

The psychological effect of slowness is in sharp contrast with that of swift action, which adds a breathless quality to the air of impending crisis.

Are we overly optimistic in searching out signs of a return to intelligent reason among the four powers? Perhaps so. Time will reveal the answer. But at least the time is hopefully long rather hazardously short.

FILIBUSTER'S LESSON

REGARDLESS of the merits of outlawing the poll tax, the filibustering senators have seriously hurt the standing of the United States in world affairs. They have made it plain to all that less than two dozen senators out of 96 can halt any bill they want, and can, if so disposed, stop all Senate business.

How can the smaller European powers, hesitating between their fear of Russia and their wish to line up with the United States, dare to take the American side? If swift Congressional action were needed in their behalf, why should they believe that it would be forthcoming?

For that matter, two dozen senators are not needed to stop all the legislative wheels. Six determined senators could do so. Is it beyond all possibility that some day soon there might be six senators who were Communists or fellow travelers? If so, the present Senate rules are made to their order.

ASTOUNDING

HENRY A. Wallace will get an "astounding vote," according to his campaign manager, C. B. Baldwin. This sounds like the obscure predictions of the ancient Greek oracles, which baffled their consultants at the time and became clear only after the event. Baldwin does not say who will be astounded or why. He could mean astoundingly large or astoundingly small.

These Days

Louis Budenz, testifying on the methods of the conspirators to have their will told, a congressional committee that those who turn disloyal to the Communist Party are expelled and are subjected to a campaign of character assassination.

This weapon, character assassination, has been employed with virility and violence against all opponents of Communism, all defenders of the American way of life. In fact, the New Dealers, having become familiar with the tactics of their political allies, adopted character assassination as one of their chief weapons for the destruction of their political antagonists, spreading their miserable tales not only through newspaper columnists and radio commentators but by word of mouth, by a malicious whispering campaign which made it impossible for the victim to discover the source of the attack or to defend himself from it. The technique is based on the assumption that where there is smoke, there must be fire; but in this enterprise, both the smoke and the fire were synthetically prepared by the evil minds engaged in character assassination.

There was Dr. William Wirt, educator of Gary, Ind., who, like so many schoolmen, came down to Washington at the very beginning of the New Deal to establish the New Day. He met the young boys and girls who were full of the devil at various parties and meetings. He was shocked by their treason. He made public what he heard—and every word of his testimony has since been confirmed by the course of events. They ridiculed him. They made him out to be an old dodo. He became the laughing stock of the country and died of humiliation in 1938.

I once attended a cocktail party in the early 1930s at which the infants just out of college were proudly displaying themselves in the Mandarin manner. Their conversation turned on the work of a magazine writer for one of the more conservative publications of the country. One youth, full of cocktails, announced that this writer would be liquidated soon. So far as magazine writing was concerned, he was. Not a publication would touch his work. His character had been assassinated.

Those who object to the methods of the Dies or the Thomas committees for getting at the La Follette committee was organized by the Harold Ware group to assassinate the characters of Americans who were defending America against Communism.

Such master-minds as John Abt, Charles Kramer, Nathan Witt, and Lee Pressman devised the trickeries of that committee. Its main object was to create a public antagonism for the organizations of business, the National Association of Manufacturers, the various trade associations, the Chambers of Commerce and the like and, having poisoned the public mind by distortions of motive and purpose, to vilify any individual associated with such organizations. They succeeded. Even businessmen and their wives and children, even conservative editors and clergymen and educators—accepted this character assassination as truthful statements of fact from a government source.

Whittling, that old American custom, is coming into its own. Peoria, Ill., has established a recreation center where people who like to make things can whittle, carve or otherwise create hand products. About 500 participate now and are having a beautiful time. Seems Peoria has whittled out a good idea.

• WALLACE DOWNTREND—Veteran political reporters covering the founders' convention of the new Progressive party in Philadelphia are revising downward their estimates of the votes Henry A. Wallace will poll in November.

From a tentative pre-convention seven million, the figure is being lowered to between three and one-half and five million. The experts say it may go even lower because of damaging publicity which came out of the conclave at the Quaker City.

The foreign policy plank of the lengthy platform was assailed as a restatement of Russian foreign policy. The delegates even beat down an amendment stating that "nothing in this plan shall be construed as the endorsement of the foreign policy of another government."

Observers felt that the new party got off to a bad start, and that it is not destined to play a major role in American politics unless the communists are cleaned out.

They also felt that Wallace himself lost prestige at his news conference when he declined to confirm or deny he had written the mystic Guru letters.

• PRICE ELEVATOR—Mrs. John Q. Public may be squirming at the continuing increase in the cost of living—but the worst is yet to come.

President Truman's Economic Advisory Council estimates that farm marketing for 1948 will be down three or four per cent. This will be a major factor contributing to high meat prices and one that will assure their continuance.

The number of cattle on farms and ranches has been dropping for the past three years. Dairy cows are down to pre-war levels; sheep numbers are the lowest in 75 years and the spring pig crop was off three per cent.

This situation, combined with the huge post-war demand for meat both at home and abroad, is expected to force prices up—and keep them there.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

ASTONISHED by Rosaleen's interest, Rowley began to talk to her about the farm. Her interest surprised him, but it was obviously genuine and not put on, and to his surprise he found that she was quite knowledgeable on farm matters. Butter-making and dairy produce she spoke of with familiarity.

"Why, you might be a farmer's wife, Rosaleen," he said smiling. The animation went out of her face.

She said: "We had a farm—in Ireland—before I came over here—before—"

"Before you went on the stage?"

She said wistfully and a trifle, it seemed to him, guiltily:

"It's not so very long ago . . . I remember it all very well." She added with a flash of spirit, "I could milk your cows for you, Rowley, now."

This was quite a new Rosaleen. Would David Hunter have approved these casual references to a farming past? Rowley thought not. Old Irish landed gentry, that was the impression David tried to put over. Rosaleen's version, he thought, was nearer the truth.

Primitive farm life, then the lure of the stage, the touring company to South Africa, marriage—separation— and finally marriage to a millionaire in New York . . .

Yes, Rosaleen Hunter had travelled a long way since milking a Kerry cow. Yet looking at her, he found it hard to believe that she had ever started. Her face had that innocent, slightly halfwitted expression, the face of one who has no history. And she looked so young—much younger than her twenty-six years.

There was something appealing about her, she had the same pathetic quality as the little calves he had driven to the butcher that morning. He looked at her as he had looked at them. Poor little devils, he had thought, a pity that they had to be killed . . .

A look of alarm came into Rosaleen's eyes. She asked uneasily: "What are you thinking of, Rowley?"

"Would you like to see over the farm and the dairy?"

"Oh indeed I would." Amused by her interest, he took her all over the farm. But when he finally suggested making her a cup of tea, an alarmed expression came into her eyes.

"Oh no—thank you, Rowley—I'd best be getting home." She looked down at her watch. "Oh! how late it is! David will be back by the 5:20 train. He'll wonder where I am. I—must hurry." She added shakily: "I have enjoyed myself, Rowley."

And that, he thought, was true. She had enjoyed herself. She had been able to be natural—to be her own raw unsophisticated self. She was afraid of her brother David, that was clear. David was the brains of the family. Well, for once, she'd had an afternoon out—yes, that was it, an afternoon out just like a servant! The rich Mrs. Gordon Cloade!

He smiled grimly as he stood by the gate watching her hurrying up the hill towards Furrowbank. Just before she reached the gate a man came over it—Rowley wondered if it was David but it was a bigger, heavier man. Rosaleen drew back to let him pass, then skipped lightly over the stile, her pace accentuating almost to a run.

Yes, she'd had an afternoon out—and he, Rowley, had wasted over an hour of valuable time! Well, perhaps it hadn't been wasted. Rosaleen, he thought, had seemed to like him. That might come in useful. A pretty thing—yes, and the calves this morning had been pretty . . . poor little devils.

Standing there, lost in thought, he was startled by a voice, and raised his head sharply.

A big man in a broad felt hat with a pack slung across his shoulders was standing on the footpath at the other side of the gate.

"Is this the way to Warmley Vale?"

As Rowley stared he repeated his question. With an effort Rowley recalled his thoughts and answered:

"Yes, keep right along the path —across that next field. Turn to the left when you get to the road and about three minutes takes you right into the village."

In the self same words he had answered that particular question several hundred times. People took the footpath on leaving the station, followed it up over the hill, and lost faith in it as they came down the other side and saw no sign of their destination, for Blackwell Copse masked Warmley Vale from sight. It was tucked away in a hollow there with only the tip of its church tower showing.

The next question was not quite so usual, but Rowley answered it without much thought.

"The Stag or the Bells and Motley. The Stag for choice. They're both equally good—or bad. I should think you'd get a room all right."

The question made him look more attentively at his interlocutor. Nowadays people usually booked a room beforehand at any place they were going to . . .

The man was tall, with a bronzed face, a beard, and very blue eyes. He was about forty and not ill-looking in a tough and rather daredevil style. It was not, perhaps, a wholly pleasant face.

Come from overseas somewhere, thought Rowley. Was there or was there not a faint Colonial twang in his accent? Curious, in some way, the face was not unfamiliar.

Where had he seen that face, or a face very like it, before?

Whilst he was puzzling unsuccessfully over that problem, the stranger startled him by asking:

"Can you tell me if there's a house called Furrowbank near here?"

Rowley answered slowly:

MODERN MANNERS

When you are a guest at a church wedding it is permissible to speak in low tones, but don't turn constantly to watch arrivals and talk in ordinary conversational tones. You are in church, remember!

YOUR FUTURE

This is a good time to do work around your home or to shop for domestic goods and furniture. You can be quite energetic about it. During your next year you will be greatly interested in love, family and social activities. If you refrain from rather doubtful adventures, happiness and success should be forthcoming.

HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT?

1. Transjordan. His full title is King Abdullah Ibn Ul-Hussein.

2. The Mediterranean sea.

3. Fir cones stand erect; spruce cones hang.

4. It is a pot for melting ore or metals.

5. The clarinet.

The President wants Congress to drop the Commie probe and get on with housing. He doesn't realize that this might open up a dozen apartments immediately.

Our great need is for low rental housing but we can't find any high-minded citizen who wants to own it.

This may sound like a blunt epigram but surgery requires a sharp knife for the best results.

They also felt that Wallace himself lost prestige at his news conference when he declined to confirm or deny he had written the mystic Guru letters.

Government ownership is proposed but it sounds like a step backward. When Columbus landed on this continent the In-

"Why, yes. Up there on the hill. You must have passed close by it—that is, if you've come along the footpath from the station."

"Yes—that's what I did." He turned, staring up the hill. "So that was it—that big white new-looking house."

"Yes, that's the one."

"A big place to run," said the man. "Must cost a lot to keep up."

A devil of a lot, thought Rowley.

And our money. . . . A stirring of anger made him forget for the moment where he was. . . .

With a start he came back to himself to see the stranger staring up the hill with a curious speculative look in his eyes.

"Who lives there?" he said. "Is it—Mrs. Cloade?"

"That's right," said Rowley.

"Mrs. Gordon Cloade."

The stranger raised his eyebrows. He seemed gently amused.

"Oh," he said, "Mrs. Gordon Cloade. Very nice for her!"

Then he gave a short nod.

"Thanks, pal," he said, and shifting the pack he carried he strode on towards Warmley Vale.

Rowley turned slowly back into the farmyard. His mind was still puzzling over something.

These Days

Louis Budenz, testifying on the methods of the conspirators to have their will told, a congressional committee that those who turn disloyal to the Communist Party are expelled and are subjected to a campaign of character assassination.

This weapon, character assassination, has been employed with virility and violence against all opponents of Communism, all defenders of the American way of life. In fact, the New Dealers, having become familiar with the tactics of their political allies, adopted character assassination as one of their chief weapons for the destruction of their political antagonists, spreading their miserable tales not only through newspaper columnists and radio commentators but by word of mouth, by a malicious whispering campaign which made it impossible for the victim to discover the source of the attack or to defend himself from it. The technique is based on the assumption that where there is smoke, there must be fire; but in this enterprise, both the smoke and the fire were synthetically prepared by the evil minds engaged in character assassination.

There was Dr. William Wirt, educator of Gary, Ind., who, like so many schoolmen, came down to Washington at the very beginning of the New Deal to establish the New Day. He met the young boys and girls who were full of the devil at various parties and meetings. He was shocked by their treason. He made public what he heard—and every word of his testimony has since been confirmed by the course of events. They ridiculed him. They made him out to be an old dodo. He became the laughing stock of the country and died of humiliation in 1938.

I once attended a cocktail party in the early 1930s at which the infants just out of college were proudly displaying themselves in the Mandarin manner. Their conversation turned on the work of a magazine writer for one of the more conservative publications of the country. One youth, full of cocktails, announced that this writer would be liquidated soon. So far as magazine writing was concerned, he was. Not a publication would touch his work. His character had been assassinated.

Those who object to the methods of the Dies or the Thomas committees for getting at the La Follette committee was organized by the Harold Ware group to assassinate the characters of Americans who were defending America against Communism.

Such master-minds as John Abt, Charles Kramer, Nathan Witt, and Lee Pressman devised the trickeries of that committee. Its main object was to create a public antagonism for the organizations of business, the National Association of Manufacturers, the various trade associations, the Chambers of Commerce and the like, and, having poisoned the public mind by distortions of motive and purpose, to vilify any individual associated with such organizations. They succeeded. Even businessmen and their wives and children, even conservative editors and clergymen and educators—accepted this character assassination as truthful statements of fact from a government source.

Whittling, that old American custom, is coming into its own. Peoria, Ill., has established a recreation center where people who like to make things can whittle, carve or otherwise create hand products. About 500 participate now and are having a beautiful time. Seems Peoria has whittled out a good idea.

air group expansion.

• WALLACE DOWNTREND—Veteran political reporters covering the founders' convention of the new Progressive party in Philadelphia are revising downward their estimates of the votes Henry A. Wallace will poll in November.

From a tentative pre-convention seven million, the figure is being lowered to between three and one-half and five million. The experts say it may go even lower because of damaging publicity which came out of the conclave at the Quaker City.

The foreign policy plank of the lengthy platform was assaulted as a restatement of Russian foreign policy. The delegates even beat down an amendment stating that "nothing in this plank shall be construed as the endorsement of the foreign policy of another government."

Observers felt that the new party got off to a bad start, and that it is not destined to play a major role in American politics unless the communists are cleaned out.

They also felt that Wallace himself lost prestige at his news conference when he declined to confirm or deny he had written the mystic Guru letters.

• PRICE ELEVATOR—Mrs. John Q. Public may be squirming at the continuing increase in the cost of living—but the worst is yet to come.

President Truman's Economic Advisory Council estimates that farm marketing for 1948 will be down three or four per cent. This will be a major factor contributing to high meat prices and one that will assure their continuance.

The number of cattle on farms and ranches has been dropping for the past three years. Dairy cows are down to pre-war levels; sheep numbers are the lowest in 75 years and the spring pig crop was off three per cent.

This situation, combined with the huge post-war demand for meat both at home and abroad, is expected to force prices up—and keep them there.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

ASTONISHED by Rosaleen's interest, Rowley began to talk to her about the farm. Her interest surprised him, but it was obviously genuine and not put on, and to his surprise he found that she was quite knowledgeable on farm matters. Butter-making and dairy produce she spoke of with familiarity.

"Why, you might be a farmer's wife, Rosaleen," he said smiling. The animation went out of her face.

She said:

"We had a farm—in Ireland—before I came over here—before—Before you went on the stage?"

She said wistfully and a trifle, it seemed to him, guilty:

"It's not so very long ago . . . I remember it all very well." She added with a flash of spirit, "I could milk your cows for you, Rowley, now."

This was quite a new Rosaleen.

David Hunter had approved these casual references to a farming past? Rowley thought not. Old Irish landed gentry, that was the impression David tried to put over. Rosaleen's version, he thought, was nearer the truth. Primitive farm life, then the lure of the stage, the touring company to South Africa, marriage—isolation in Central Africa—escape—marriage—and finally marriage to a millionaire in New York . . .

Yes, Rosaleen Hunter had travelled a long way since milking a Kerry cow. Yet looking at her, he found it hard to believe that she had ever started. Her face had that innocent, slightly halfwitted expression, the face of one who has no history. And she looked so young—much younger than her twenty-six years.

There was something appealing about her, she had the same pathetic quality as the little calves he had driven to the butcher that morning. He looked at her as he had looked at them. Poor little devils, he had thought, a pity that they had to be killed . . .

A look of alarm came into Rosaleen's eyes. She asked uneasily: "What are you thinking of, Rowley?"

"Would you like to see over the farm and the dairy?"

"Oh indeed I would."

Amused by her interest, he took her all over the farm. But when he finally suggested making her a cup of tea, an alarmed expression came into her eyes.

"Oh no—thank you, Rowley—I'd best be getting home." She looked down at her watch. "Oh! how late it is! David will be back by the 5:20 train. He'll wonder where I am. I—I must hurry." She added shyly: "I have enjoyed myself, Rowley."

And that, he thought, was true. She had enjoyed herself. She had been able to be natural—to be her own raw unsophisticated self. She was afraid of her brother David. David was the brains of the family. Well, for the man was tall, with a bronzed face, a beard, and very blue eyes. He was about forty and not ill-looking in a tough and rather daredevil style. It was not, perhaps, a wholly pleasant face.

Come from overseas somewhere, thought Rowley. Was there or was there not a faint Colonial twang in his accent? Curious, in some way, the face was not unfamiliar. Where had he seen that face, or a face very like it, before?

Whilst he was puzzling unsuccessfully over that problem, the stranger started him by asking:

"Can you tell me if there's a house called Furrowbank near here?"

Rowley answered slowly:

once, she'd had an afternoon out—yes, that was it, an afternoon out just like a servant! The rich Mrs. Gordon Cloade!

He smiled grimly as he stood by the gate, watching her hurry up the hill towards Furrowbank. Just before she reached the gate a man came over it—Rowley wondered if it was David but it was a bigger, heavier man. Rosaleen drew back to let him pass, then spoke lightly over the stile, her pace accentuating almost to a run.

Yes, she'd had an afternoon off—and he, Rowley, had wasted over an hour of valuable time! Well, perhaps it hadn't been wasted. Rosaleen, he thought, had seemed to like him. That might come in useful. A pretty thing—yes, and the calves this morning had been pretty . . . poor little devils.

Standing there, lost in thought, he was startled by a voice, and raised his head sharply.

A big man in a broad felt hat with a pack slung across his shoulders was standing on the footpath at the other side of the gate.

"Is this the way to Warmley Vale?"

As Rowley stared he repeated his question. With an effort Rowley recalled his thoughts and answered:

"Yes, keep right along the path—across that next field. Turn to the left when you get to the hill, and about three minutes takes you right into the village."

In the self same words he had answered that particular question several hundred times. People took the footpath on leaving the station, followed it up over the hill, and lost faith in it as they came down the other side and saw no sign of their destination, for Blackwell Copse masked Warmley Vale from sight. It was tucked away in a hollow there with only the tip of its church tower showing.

The next question was not quite so usual, but Rowley answered it without much thought.

"The Stag or the Bells and Motley. The Stag for choice. They're both equally good—or bad. I should think you'd get a room all right."

The question made him look more attentively at his interlocutor. Nowadays people usually booked a room beforehand at any place they were going to . . .

The man was tall, with a bronzed face, a beard, and very blue eyes. He was about forty and not ill-looking in a tough and rather daredevil style. It was not, perhaps, a wholly pleasant face.

Come from overseas somewhere, thought Rowley. Was there or was there not a faint Colonial twang in his accent? Curious, in some way, the face was not unfamiliar. Where had he seen that face, or a face very like it, before?

Rowley answered slowly:

Farmers Warned Be Ready For End To Seller's Market

Crops Here, Abroad Now Top Marks

Improving Soil Of Top Import

Prospects for record breaking U. S. grain crops and greatly improved European harvests have been cited by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee of Chicago as reasons why farmers should put their land in shape to produce profitably when the present seller's market in farm crops ends.

"The gap between food supplies and demand is narrowing steadily," Larry A. Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent, said Tuesday. "The time is approaching when food pipelines may be filled. Bigger crops here and abroad this year may speed this trend."

Corn production in 1948 may reach an all-time high of 3,328,862,000 bushels, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture forecasts. The previous record was 3,287,927,000 bushels in 1946. This year's wheat crop estimate of 1,251,751,000 bushels is the second largest in history. Oats and barley yields will be well above average years.

Reports from Europe indicate much bigger grain harvests than had originally been expected.

FOOD SHIPMENTS abroad in coming months will tell the story. If Europe's needs decline and our supplies increase, then there will be a "bulge" in the bread basket. That will mean a buyer's instead of a seller's market in farm crops. Livestock prices will not be affected, because of the continued shortage of meat animals on farms. But grain and field crop prices may drop.

Best declared that when competitive market conditions return, the farmer who makes the most is the one who produces for the least. One way to lower production costs is to make each acre produce more bushels. Then there is a bigger margin between what you get for your crops and what it costs you to produce them." He added:

"To get those extra bushels per acre, you have to build your soil's fertility level. You need a good rotation with deep-rooted legumes that put crop-nourishing organic matter into the soil."

"The organic matter added by the roots and tops of alfalfa and sweet clover will make the soil mellow, healthier, and better drained and ventilated. The soil will be easier to work. It will have more room to store rainfall. Crop roots will not be cramped for space in which to forage for plant nutrients, air and moisture."

"But remember that soil building legumes need plenty of phosphate and potash if they are to give you thrifty stands. Where tests indicate, they may need lime, too. You can further increase the soil's organic matter reserves by returning all animal over."

Model Airplane Show Due Here Thursday Night

Officials of Circleville Kiwanis Club said Tuesday everything was in readiness for the model airplane show in Ted Lewis Park Thursday evening.

The show, featuring miniature power models, is to start at 7:30 p. m., according to leading Kiwanians, sponsors of the exhibition. The event originally was scheduled for last week, but was rained out.

The demonstration will be handled by Edward R. Fischer of Chillicothe, one of the leading model airplane builders and flyers of Southern Ohio.

Fischer is to demonstrate two types of aircraft—those with conventional gasoline motors and a newer type—a jet pulse job built on the same principal used by the Nazis in World War II for the construction of buzz-bombs. This type model airplane has been clocked at speeds approaching 150 miles per hour.

Both type of model aircraft will be controlled by 75-foot wires and varied kinds of acrobatics are possible, despite the fact that flying time is limited to a few minutes.

Fischer, who builds his own planes, will perform from about second base on the park softball diamond. There will be no admission charged to either the park or the grandstand, Kiwanians reported. The project is a regular Kiwanis club program.

Recruiter Tells Army's Way To Beat The Draft

C. SGT. Hull of the Circleville Army recruiting station said Tuesday, that the Army now is accepting Regular Army enlistments for a period of 21 months, the same period as the draft. Other enlistment periods still remain at 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years.

Hull recommends a three year enlistment as that is the shortest period for which the soldier can enlist and be given his choice of branch and theatre.

Next to the three year enlistment, he recommends two years, because at the conclusion of a two year voluntary enlistment, the soldier is not required to join the reserves.

Strike Lasts Only 11 Hours

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10—Workers of the PESCO Products Co. went back to work today with a 13-cent raise after one of the shortest strikes on record.

The workers walked out yesterday at 10 a. m. At 9 p. m., negotiators for the company and as he will have to do on a 21-month enlistment or draft.

Last of all, Hull advises young men of draft age to "beat the draft" by enlisting for 21 months now. By doing this, the soldier will have completed his basic training by the time the draft gets into full swing.

"A man that far ahead stands a mighty good chance for early advancement in the expansion of the new regular army," Hull declared.

Local 363 of the CIO-United Automobile Workers effected the compromise.

The shad, regarded as a fine food fish, has been steadily decreasing during the past 40 years.

Farmers Warned Be Ready For End To Seller's Market

Crops Here, Abroad Now Top Marks

Improving Soil Of Top Import

Prospects for record breaking U. S. grain crops and greatly improved European harvests have been cited by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee of Chicago as reasons why farmers should put their land in shape to produce profitably when the present seller's market in farm crops ends.

"The gap between food supplies and demand is narrowing steadily," Larry A. Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent, said Tuesday. "The time is approaching when food pipelines may be filled. Bigger crops here and abroad this year may speed this trend."

Corn production in 1948 may reach an all-time high of 3,328,862,000 bushels, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture forecasts. The previous record was 3,287,927,000 bushels in 1946. This year's wheat crop estimate of 1,251,751,000 bushels is the second largest in history. Oats and barley yields will be well above average years.

Reports from Europe indicate much bigger grain harvests than had originally been expected.

FOOD SHIPMENTS abroad in coming months will tell the story. If Europe's needs decline and our supplies increase, then there will be a "bulge" in the bread basket. That will mean a buyer's instead of a seller's market in farm crops. Livestock prices will not be affected, because of the continued shortage of meat animals on farms. But grain and field crop prices may drop.

Best declared that when competitive market conditions return, the farmer who makes the most is the one who produces for the least. One way to lower production costs is to make each acre produce more bushels. Then there is a bigger margin between what you get for your crops and what it costs you to produce them." He added:

"To get those extra bushels per acre, you have to build your soil's fertility level. You need a good rotation with deep-rooted legumes that put crop-nourishing organic matter into the soil."

"The organic matter added by the roots and tops of alfalfa and sweet clover will make the soil mellow, healthier, and better drained and ventilated. The soil will be easier to work. It will have more room to store rainfall. Crop roots will not be cramped for space in which to produce for plant nutrients, air and moisture."

"But remember that soil building legumes need plenty of phosphate and potash if they are to give you thrifty stands. Where tests indicate, they may need lime, too. You can further increase the soil's organic matter reserves by returning all animal manure and plowing under corn stalks, straw and other crop leftovers."

Model Airplane Show Due Here Thursday Night

Officials of Circleville Kiwanis Club said Tuesday everything was in readiness for the model airplane show in Ted Lewis Park Thursday evening.

The show, featuring miniature power models, is to start at 7:30 p. m., according to leading Kiwanians, sponsors of the exhibition. The event originally was scheduled for last week, but was rained out.

The demonstration will be handled by Edward R. Fischer of Chillicothe, one of the leading model airplane builders and flyers of Southern Ohio.

Fischer is to demonstrate two types of aircraft—those with conventional gasoline motors and a newer type—a jet pulse job built on the same principal used by the Nazis in World War II for the construction of buzz-bombs. This type model airplane has been clocked at speeds approaching 150 miles per hour.

Both type of model aircraft will be controlled by 75-foot wires and varied kinds of acrobatics are possible, despite the fact that flying time is limited to a few minutes.

Fischer, who builds his own planes, will perform from about second base on the park softball diamond. There will be no admission charged to either the park or the grandstand, Kiwanians reported. The project is a regular Kiwanis club program.
